Team PNG athletes to go through final endorsement process with JC

A final process of endorsement for all Team PNG athletes selected for the Pacific Games in Samoa this year will be carried out from March 18 to 26 by the Papua New Guinea Olympic Committee Justification Committee (JC).

The National Federations of the 28 sports on the Samoa Games programme were reminded by PNGOC of the requirements that needed to be submitted by February 27th.

February 27 is also the deadline for 50% payment of the levy.

Secretary General of PNGOC, Auvita Rapilla said the justification process is very important and sports must meet all the requirements if they want their athletes to be considered for the Games.

“We want all our best athletes to attend this Games and the Justification Committee plays a big role in ensuring that those selected for Team PNG meet the standards of the Team PNG selection policies,” she said.

The JC was set up to ensure that fair and proper processes were followed by teams to select their squads to represent Team PNG.

With the aim of always performing to their best and maintaining the high standard set on home soil in 2015, it is Team PNG’s wish to see only the best and fittest line up in Apia in July.

Thurston helps raise funds for Team PNG at TFR auctions

He said the Fun Run is more than just a fundraising event, it also provides special opportunities for people in different ways.

Worthington-Eyre added that a further 38,800 shirts are left to sell before the Fun Run is held on June 16 and appealed to those who wish to buy them to contact Trukai or the PNG Olympic Committee.

Trukai sponsored PNGOC with 100,000 shirts for the Fun Run this year with the aim of getting as many people as possible to participate.

Hurston and Tate’s visit added a special touch to the auctions.

Both men travelled to PNG on the invitation of Trukai Industries to be part of the 20 year celebrations. They shared some experiences and met guests while also answering some questions from the audience.

Thurston said helping communities through sports, education and healthy living is something he is also passionate about and participates in similar activities with the Cowboys.

This year marks 20 years of Trukai Industries as the major sponsor of the Fun Run and Worthington-Eyre said it is their largest corporate social responsibility programme.

"It is one that we work hard to organize and run every year because we believe in what it does in providing different opportunities for people while also helping the PNG Olympic Committee raise much needed funds for Team PNG," Worthington-Eyre said.

Trukai also announced that they are extending their support of the Cowboys in the National Rugby League.

Last year marked a decade of their partnership with the Cowboys and they are happy to extend that further.

Trukai will also be celebrating their 50th year of existence in PNG in 2020 and the CEO said it is going to be another celebration.
The National Sports Women and Girls Sports Day has been launched in Papua New Guinea with the aim to empower women and girls through sport. Internationally, countries who participate in the event observe the day on the first Wednesday of February.

Its idea is to recognize the achievement and participation of women and girls in sport and also to reach out to them at the community level.

This can help create pathways to promote and strengthen different programmes being run for girls and women in the communities.

Auvita Rapilla, IOC Member and Secretary General of the PNG Olympic Committee, acknowledged the PNG Sports Foundation for the initiative saying gender equality is something the International Olympic Committee strongly promotes.

“We must strive to give every young Papua New Guinean the opportunity to play sport, compete and inherit the values that come with it. “They must love being active, stay active and live healthy lives,” Rapilla said. “Sport is an excellent tool for human development. “Sport builds confidence, it encourages self-discipline, provides a sense of accomplishment and develop decision-making skills, and other important character traits such as management and negotiation that can empower women to become leaders in the work place and other areas of life,” she said.

Rapilla said the IOC is committed to the principle of gender equality by reaching 50% of women at the Olympic Games.

At the Rio Olympic Games in 2016, there were 45.2% female participation and at the Youth Olympic Games in Buenos Aires last year, gender equality was achieved with an equal number of male and female participation.

However, the Olympic Movement’s commitment to gender equality extends beyond its efforts to increase women’s participation in the Olympic Games.

The Olympic Charter states that one of the roles of the IOC is “encourage and support the promotion of women in sport at all levels with a view to implementing the principles of equality of men and women”.

Fencing trains new coaches for PNG

Newly established National Federation, Fencing PNG, began on a high note with a two week training programme for its coaches in Port Moresby this year.

It ran from February 4th to 17th and was carried out by the Development Officer of the Oceania Fencing Confederation, Leon Thomas.

The training focused on the Foil as the primary weapon of competition.

Trainee coaches were taken through the basic attacks, defense and the rules of the game.

They had their first round of assessment with a practical coaching session with students from the Port Moresby International School on February 17.

Thomas will return to PNG in May to review the status and progress of the coaches.

He was satisfied with the results following the practical session and said that those coaches who prove that they are competent will attain their Level 1 certificate as the first Foil Fencing Coaches for PNG.
Long Term Athlete Development (LTAD) is an important area in sport. It looks at introducing people to a sport at a very young age and maintaining and guiding them through it throughout their life.

Under the LTAD concept, sport does not begin when a person reaches school age, and it does not end when they retire.

Sports specialist, Dr. Peter Davis pointed out that preparing future athletes begins with an individual when they are still babies.

He made a presentation on the topic during the coaches’ workshop in Port Moresby at the Lamana Hotel on February 15.

The two-day workshop was attended by representatives from all national sports federations.

The workshop focused on the preparation of coaches for sports who will be participating at this year’s Pacific Games in Samoa.

The lessons learned during the LTAD prepare them for the different choices they may have in life.

Davis also took sports officials through the Canadian model of the LTAD which is regarded as the best in the world and has been adopted by many countries, and which Davis helped write.

Davis was in the country to assist PNG Olympic Committee’s Chris Amini develop coaches through finding out and giving them training and resources based on their specific sporting needs.

Those who continue to pursue sport can excel as elite athletes while those who choose another path can still participate through other means.

LTAD models from other countries such as New Zealand and Australia were also outlined.

National sports day for women and girls launched

Board Chairman of the Papua New Guinea Sports Foundation, Ian Chow welcomed the initiative and encouraged organisations and both men and women leaders to be part of the programme.

Papua New Guinea international female basketball athlete, Betty Angula shared her experience with other women and girls who came to witness the event.

She said sport has helped her to develop into well discipline person and the values she learned there has helped her to focus on other aspects of her life.

Part of the celebrations that day saw women from various government bodies and stakeholders participate in friendly sporting competitions.

Following the launch, the Day will be observed every year.
Papua New Guinea’s number one Brewer, SP Brewery, has renewed its long standing support for sports partnership with the PNG Olympic Committee (PNGOC) by supporting Team PNG’s participation into the 2020 Olympics.

SP Brewery’s association with the PNGOC goes back as early as the 1980s during the days of the Pepsi Fun Run.

SP Brewery has been the major sponsor of the prestigious ‘SP Sports Awards’ since 1992 where it has worked in collaboration with the PNGOC and the PNG Sports Foundation.

SP Brewery is proud to be associated with the PNGOC as it continues to strive to provide opportunities for athletes while maintaining a responsible and positive image of the country and other stakeholders.

She said the agreement is timely since it comes ahead of the 16th Pacific Games, scheduled for Apia, Samoa in July of this year (2019).

PNG women’s rugby league film wins international award

A documentary film and radio story about Papua New Guinea’s first national women’s rugby league team, the Orchids, are receiving international recognition for shining a light on the social impact of women’s sport and fostering community discussion about gender-based violence and female leadership.

Both media projects were supported by the Australian Government through the Pacific Sports Partnerships (PSP) program and are bringing the stories of Pacific women’s sport to new, global audiences.

ABC journalist Aaron Kearney’s radio report, Orchids Bloom, produced in the lead-up to the Orchids’ inaugural match against the Australian Jillaroos in 2017, recently picked up the silver medal for audio storytelling at the International Sports Press Association (AIPS) Sports Media Awards in Switzerland.

The new awards are pitched as the highest international accolade in the sports media industry.

The award-winning story, which was broadcasted by ABC Radio Australia and Grandstand, is part of a portfolio of material produced by Kearney as part of ABC International Development’s media coverage of the Australian Government-funded PSP program.

Meanwhile, Power Meri (Powerful Women), an internationally released documentary feature film about the Orchids, Kisapai said the Athletes’ Forum was a great opportunity for athletes from around the region to share their ideas and also talk about issues affecting them directly.

Other presentations at the forum came from the Executive Officer of Oceania Regional Anti-Doping Organisation (ORADO), Natanya Potoi-Ulia and Executive Director of Pacific Games Council (PGC), Andrew Minogue.

Swimmers start the year with a splash

Papua New Guinea Swim team members kick started the year on a high note with the support of Australian coach, Rick Van Der Zant with a one week training camp each in Lae and Port Moresby.

Van Der Zant has a vast experience with the PNG team coaching the national side at many of the major international tournaments.

He has also worked closely with Ryan Pini when he trained at the Yeronga Park Swimming Club in Brisbane.

Van Der Zant was Pini’s coach when he went on to win the gold medal at the 2006 Commonwealth Games.

More recently, he was the head coach of the PNG team at the Oceania Swimming Championships and also travelled with the young team to the FINA World Championships last month in China.

The swimmers are utilizing that experience and making the most of the opportunity of his sessions.

The camp helps to set up the athletes for a big year ahead with the Pacific Games six months away.

In the lead up, a team will be sent to the Arafura Games in Australia to assist with their lead up preparations.

Van Der Zant with the help of the local club coaches are also getting the swimmers ready for the National Championships in March.

This will be the selection event for the Pacific Games team.

Orchids’ story gets international acclaim

More than 400 people watched the film including festival regulars, school students, Tahitian female athletes, Pacific film-makers and Australia’s Consul-General in French Polynesia, Paul Wilson.

Directed by journalist, Joanna Lester and shot by a small crew of Australians and Papua New Guineans, the film explores the broader social impact of the Orchids and their influence on the status and treatment of women in PNG.

It tells the story of the team’s journey to the Rugby League World Cup in Australia through the voices of pioneering players, including inaugural captain, Cathy Neap and Brisbane Broncos NRLW star, Amelia Kuk.

Power Meri is currently screening in Australia and Papua New Guinea, and will be released in the UK, New Zealand and other Pacific countries in 2019.
